Introduction

In line with the developments in the labour market in the State of Qatar, its expanding activities as well as the increased number of occupations in various sectors, and in conformity with the International Standard Classification of Occupations (ISCO), the Ministry of Labour (MoL) developed the Qatar National Occupational Classification Manual (QNOC) to organize economic sectors, and human resources across all competences, skills, and occupational tasks.

The Qatar National Occupational Classification Manual comprises a statement of objectives and methodology as well as a list of occupational classifications with respective codes. The MoL will continue to develop and update this manual, as and when needed, in order to include new job titles generated by the labour market across sectors and specify the job description of each occupation.

- To establish a unified language reference for occupations across sectors in the State of Qatar.
- To facilitate the flow of data and information among labour market components in terms of occupational reality and evolution.
- To enable stakeholders to prepare strategic plans based on the occupational needs in the labour market and manage the workforce at the national level.
- To facilitate the use of comparative methods related to the labour market and occupations at the local, regional, and international levels.
- To help design and develop occupational trainings and mentoring programmes at the national level.

Manual Development Methodology

The Qatar National Occupational Classification Manual (QNOC) is developed, based on the International Standard Classification of Occupations (ISCO-08) and the Gulf Cooperation Council Standard Industrial Classification Revision 3 of 2021.

Accordingly, the classification of occupations in this manual includes five occupational levels:

1. The major group: It represents the first level and is referred to as (chapter), from which a sub-group derives.
2. The sub-major group: It represents the second level and is referred to as (section), from which a minor group derives.
3. The minor group: It represents the third level and is referred to as (group), from which units derive.
4. Units: They represent the fourth level and are referred to as (categories), from which professions derive.
5. Professions: They represent the fifth level, and they reflect specific job titles.

Accordingly, the number of groups would increase as we move from one level to another in this classification.

Chapters encompass nine groups, while Sections might reach 40 groups. Occupations, which are at the bottom of occupational classifications, include more than 3,000 occupations.

Coding

Given the large number of occupational levels and job titles stated in this manual, coding becomes necessary to facilitate referencing and updating. The coding methodology, recommended by the Gulf Classification Manual, is adopted in coding job titles in this manual, which include seven digits for each occupation, as follows:

1. The first digit from the left stands for the «Chapter».
2. The second digit from the left stands for the «Section».
3. The third digit from the left stands for the «Group.»
4. The fourth digit from the left stands for the «Category».
5. The fifth, sixth, and seventh digits from the left stand for the “profession”, allowing for more than 100 professions in one category.

Find below the physicist (general) classification, as an example:

Level	Naming Convention	Code
Chapter	Professionals	2
Section	Science Professionals	21
Group	Physical Professionals	211
Category	Physicists	2111
Profession	Physicist (general)	2111.001
	Thermal physicist	2111.002

ISCO Characteristics

By following the ISCO standards and methodology, the Qatari National Occupational classification is characterized by the following:

- 1- Its inclusive aspect so as to ensure coverage of all types and levels of occupations.
- 2- Its flexibility so as to accommodate any additional occupations that the labour market may provide.
- 3- Its rationality in sequencing and building the structure of occupations with its multiple levels, down to the smallest level, the profession.
- 4- Its ease of use in view of the clarity of its components and their logical sequence.
- 5- The compatibility of its coding method with electronic systems and software.
